

“Children and Youth in Forced Labour during World War II”

Trilateral German-Russian-Ukrainian Online Work- and Studycamp with Gestapokeller and Augustaschacht Memorials
(15.02.2022 – 26.02.2022)

In the Osnabrück region in Lower Saxony/Germany, there are two places of remembrance which are closely connected and form a unique ensemble with special and diverse learning opportunities due to their historical connection under National Socialism: The Gestapokeller Memorial in cells of the former Secret State Police (Gestapo) in the city of Osnabrück, and the Augustaschacht Memorial in buildings of the former Ohrbeck Labour Education Camp (AEL) in Hasbergen/Osnabrück district. Furthermore, there were a number of forced labour camps in the Osnabrück region. With hardly any remains from those camps, it is the witnesses' statements and memories of the former forced labourers that are of great importance for researching the history of those sites.

The Project:

For many years, SCI and the Memorials have been conducting regular Work- and Studycamps at the historical sites with young international volunteers. Volunteers have the opportunity to make visible the stories of the often forgotten millions of forced labourers and the hundreds of thousands of AEL prisoners. In earlier Work- and Studycamps, this has been achieved through archaeological-documentary activities. Since 2020, the cooperation has been redesigned into an additional online format to meet the new requirements under the pandemic.

In our 3rd Online Work- and Studycamp, volunteers have the opportunity to interact with other international volunteers online, to exchange different historical perspectives and discuss references to the present. They will contribute to historical-biographical work and take part in virtual tours at historical sites, including the Memorials. Using selected biographies, the volunteers will deal with the perspectives and experiences of children and young people, who were forced to work in Nazi Germany.

Historical Background:

Until the end of WWII, over 30.000 forced labourers worked in the Osnabrück region and had to live in more than 500 forced labour camps. More than one third was from Ukraine, Belarus and Russia. They were monitored by the Gestapo. In case forced labourers attempted to flee, or their work performance was considered 'insufficient', forced labourers were sent to labour education camps – male workers to AEL Ohrbeck and female workers to AEL Ahaus. There they were forced to work under even worse conditions and systematically poor care. Many lost their lives in Gestapo custody. Their punishment served as a deterrent for other forced labourers. Further research is to be done on the fate of children forced labourers in the Osnabrück region.

Volunteers' tasks:

The volunteers work together online to prepare the story of young forced labourers in the Osnabrück region. They each transcribe text fragments of a biographical interview with former forced labourers, help with translations where possible, put the fragments together, put them in relation with historical context which they researched, and thus jointly trace the biography of this person in order to preserve it for the future. The joint project of the volunteers will be included in the memorial's exhibition and thus serve further documentary and educational purposes.

Structure of the project:

The Online Work- and Studycamp takes place between 15.-26.02.2022. Volunteers meet in virtual spaces on a regular basis, between 5pm and 8pm (UTC+1) each Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. An Online Work- and Studycamp puts emphasis on community and a strong cohesiveness of the group in addition to joint volunteer work and historical learning. Through such international encounters, SCI has made an important contribution to understanding and peace work during the last 101 years. For this reason, there will be an extensive group-finding phase at the beginning of the project (Tue 15.02. – Wed 16.02.) to get to know each other, clarify expectations, wishes and suggestions, gather individual knowledge and create a sense of community.

During the course of the project, the group will take part in online workshops on the topic, exchange information about the work and discuss and reflect on perspectives on the children's biographies and the volunteers' own references to them. There will be optional consultations with members of the team for specific questions, provision of technical support, etc. Volunteers are very welcome to share their own expertise and ideas with the rest of the group.

In addition to the meetings within the group, the volunteers work individually or in small teams on transcription, translation or research tasks according to their individual abilities.

Furthermore, the volunteers have the opportunity to take part and to contribute to an optional accompanying program. We encourage everyone to bring in own creative ideas for group activities.

Requirements:

- Equipment with tablet/computer and/or smartphone with a camera;
- stable internet connection;
- willingness to participate reliably for the entire duration (12 days, including 8 fixed dates for group meetings);

- good written & spoken English skills; knowledge of Ukrainian or Russian for transcription work is an advantage (not a requirement).
- knowledge of the usual office software is also necessary; experience with transcription software is highly appreciated.

Please bring sensitivity for the memorial theme and interest in different historical perspectives and cultures of remembrance, as well as an understanding of today's challenges.
